CAMDEN HOME FOR FRIENDLESS CHIL-DREN. - This commendable charity, which has become one of the "institutions" of that city, provided a fine supper last evening, which was crowded with ladies and gentlemen from Camden and Phila-delphia. The proceeds or the supper, together with the ice cream and strawberry stand, noticed a snug little sum for the benefit of the "Home." The Cam-den Brass Band, who volunteered their services, discoursed music and melody until late in the Atter supper the guests were called together by the Hon. A. & Cattell, of Camden, who, in a tew brief and pertinent remarks, urged the caims of this most noble charity upon all present, reminding them that every demand for means should be met upon the score of simple justice, 'as," said he, 'this roof covers the do enseless head of many au orphan whose father and protector has offered up his life to defend and save that beautiful starry emblem of our regenerated nation, waving in so much beauty and grandeur over our heads.'

Professor Ruius Adams, of Philadelphia, the celebrated elecutionist, was then introduced, and recited "Sheridan's Ride" and the "Defenders" (written by T. Buchanan Head) in his minimisable manner, when the Rev. 1 r Monroe, of the M. E. Church, was called who no make a speech; whereupon he excused himself by saying, that he was reminded of a minister who made it his boast that he never looked at, or knew what text he should preach from until he opened the Bible after he entered the pulpit; on one occasion he opened to the text which reads "I am fearfully and which he read fearfully and which he read fearfully and wonderfully made," but which he read
"I am fearfully and wenderfully mad," and now, said the Doctor, it I should make a speech after the remarks of the man who should have been Governor of the State, and will soon be United States Senator (the Bon. A. G. Cattell), and after listening to those beautiful recitations by the Professor, you might think of me that, as in the text of the preacher, "I am fearfully and wooderfully mad"—and, after a few more remarks, he retired, leaving all present in the hest possible humor. the best possible humor.

Should any desire to increase their own happiness by testing more fully that beautiful sentiment, so full of truth, uttered by the Saviour of the world, "That it is more blessed to give than to receive"—a more deserving charity than this "Home" does not present itse f. Matthew Newkirk, E-q., or Elijah G. Castell. Esq., the President and Vice President, will thankfully receive any donations for the "Home" of Camden. "Home" of Camden.
